QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

I. Whether the Superior Court of Washington State and the Court of Appeals of Washington State, improperly grant defendants' CR 12(b)(6) motion for dismissal based upon the state common law witness immunity or privilege as applied to a claim of retaliation against a person with a disability under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990?

II. Whether the state common law witness immunity or privilege, personal to the witness, extend to the witness' employer?

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

DARYL DAHLQUIST (DAHLQUIST) respectfully prays that a Writ of Certiorari issue to review the Washington Court of Appeals Commissioner's ruling Granting Motion on the Merits to Affirm in Dahlquist v. City of Kent et al., No. 57879-1-1 (June 5, 2007), on the grounds that it violates Article VI of the U.S. Constitution (Supremacy Clause) by not allowing the federal Americans with Disabilities Act statute regarding a retaliation claim to preempt Washington State common law witness immunity.

JURISDICTION

The instant Petition is filed under 28 U.S.C. § 1257 and the Washington Court of Appeals decision to be reviewed was entered on June 5, 2007.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS

Article VI, U.S. Constitution

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Daryl Dahlquist claimed that he is a disabled person who claimed that he was the victim of discrimination at The Kent City Jail. In trial of his original discrimination claim Dahlquist submitted that four law enforcement officers of the City of Kent testified falsely against him regarding Dahlquist's use of a medical bracelet used to alert individuals of his disability. The officers said the bracelet didn't exist. Dahlquist countered that it did exist and that the officers were dishonest in their testimony. The second lawsuit that is the basis of this petition was against the City of Kent, the Mayor of Kent, and four named law enforcement officers. That lawsuit was based on claims that the officers retaliated against him for exercising his rights as a disabled person in the first lawsuit. In the second lawsuit, the trial court dismissed the claims by deciding that the common law witness immunity, or privilege, prevented Dahlquist from pursuing his claims. Dahlquist claims that his federal statutory rights under the ADA, and his federal rights to claim acts of retaliation against a disabled person, preempted any state immunity applicable to a witness; and he claims that the witness immunity is personal to the witness and does not immunize the employer of the witness.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

Dahlquist submits that the law in Washington is in conflict with federal law regarding immunities which would apply to the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990. He believes that there is little case law in the State of Washington which helps to resolve the issue. He argues that his claim involves issues of substantial public interest.[1]

Dahlquist makes two claims: (1) that the state's common law witness immunity does not apply to the federal ADA statute as regards a retaliation claim;

[1] "Dahlquist's appeal is very nearly frivolous. But his argument that federal law may preempt the privilege is not frivolous and there is no case dealing directly with application of the witness privilege to the ADA. Resolving all doubts in Dahlquist's favor, the appeal will not be characterized as frivolous." App. 9.

and (2) he claims that the common law witness privilege is personal to the witness only and does not extend in this case to the witness' employer, the City of Kent or the Mayor of Kent.

RAP 13.4 establishes the considerations governing whether or not the Supreme Court will accept review of a lower court decision RAP 13.4(b). Dahlquist argues that the decision of the lower court is in conflict with a ruling of the State of Washington Supreme Court in Savage v. State, 127 Wn.2d 434, 899 P.2d 1270 (1995), regarding the question of whether the immunity of an employee or agent extends to immunize the employee's employer or the agent's principal.

Dahlquist acknowledges the common law witness immunity or privilege. He submits that this should not extend to public officers in this context. He claims also that the common law privilege does not extend to federal statutory causes of action such as the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990. Constitutional issues also are suggested by the claim that under the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution, Dahlquist's federal statutory rights preempt Washington's common law witness immunity. Article VI, U.S. Constitution.

I. The state common law witness immunity or privilege should not apply to a federal claim of retaliation under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990.

The definition of retaliation under the ADA is broad:

> No person shall discriminate against any individual because such individual has opposed any act or practice made unlawful by this Act or because such individual made a charge, testified, assisted, or participated in any manner in an investigation, proceeding or hearing under this Act 42 U.S.C. § 12203(a).

Under CR 12(b)(6), Dahlquist's allegations are assumed to be true, Hoffer v. State, 110 Wn.2d 415, 755 P.2d 781 (1988). Because no answer was filed before the motion to dismiss, the affirmative defense of qualified immunity was not raised and should not be considered, Gomez v. Toledo, 446 U.S. 635 (1980). For that reason, the only basis for the dismissal of the case is application of the absolute witness privilege or immunity. In this case, four law enforcement officers have testified that Dahlquist did not have a bracelet on at the time when he was in the Kent City Jail, which warned officers of the vulnerability of his arms and shoulders to mistreatment. Dahlquist asserts that this false testimony was a form of retaliation against him because he sued the City of Kent for failure to properly accommodate his disabilities as required by the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA). Dahlquist claims that the common law witness immunity in Washington does not extend to the rights provided under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 when there is a claim of retaliation under the ADA.

The Commissioner's ruling in this case appears to be based primarily upon the perception that the same privileges apply to the ADA as the privileges which apply to the Federal Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1983. App. 5 through App. 7. The Federal Civil Rights Act was enacted in 1871 shortly after the Civil War. Briscoe v. LaHue, 460 U.S. 325, 103 S.Ct. 1108, 75 L.Ed.2d 96 (1983). The Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 was enacted more than a century later. The Federal Civil Rights Act recognized immunities existing at the time of enactment of that statute, Ibid., 330. There doesn't appear to be case law which expressly absorbs the same immunities into the ADA.

The two statutes are not identically extensive. Under the Federal Civil Rights Act, principles of vicarious liability do not apply so as to hold the employer or principal responsible for the misbehavior of the employee or agent. Monell v. Department of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611 (1978). This is not so under the ADA. Duvall v. County of Kitsap, 260 F.3d 1124 (9th Cir. 2001). Under the Federal Civil Rights Act, a governmental entity or employer is not entitled to qualified immunity, which is personal to the state agent or actor. Owen v. City of Independence, 445 U.S. 622 (1980). The ADA, unlike the Federal Civil Rights Act, is not limited to defendants who are acting under color of state law. Duvall v. County of Kitsap, 260 F.3d 1124 (9th Cir. 2001).

The Commissioner determined that the ADA prohibits discrimination by a "public entity" but does not extend to individual liability, citing Walsh v. Nevada Dept. of Human Resources, 471 F.3d 1033, 1037-38 (9th Cir. 2006). App. 6. However, the Walsh case didn't deal with the issue of retaliation; it was concerned with the issue of whether or not the entity itself discriminated by failing to accommodate a disability. This was the issue in Dahlquist's first lawsuit. He wasn't required to win the first lawsuit in order to claim retaliation. Treglia v. Town of Manlius, 313 F.3d 713 (2d Cir. 2002).

The Commissioner also determined that a claim under the ADA is subject to the defense of qualified immunity, Bartell v. Lohiser, 215 F.3d 550, 557 (6th Cir. 2000). App. 7. If the affirmative defense of qualified immunity was not pled in this case, the Court should not apply it despite the failure of the defendants to raise the issue. Gomez, supra. The defense of qualified immunity was not raised by the defendants as an affirmative defense against claims of retaliation.

The Ninth Circuit has held that the witness litigation privilege does not apply to an ADA action. Pardi v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals, 389 F.3d 840 (9th Cir. 2004). That court noted a similar ruling by the Seventh Circuit in Steffes v. Steppan Co., 144 F.3d 1070, 1074 (7th Cir. 1998). Pardi quotes Steffes stating: "A state absolute litigation privilege purporting to confer immunity from suit cannot defeat a federal cause of action." Pardi, supra 852. The court in Pardi found that the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution gives Congress the power to preempt state and local law such as laws relating to privileges. Pardi, supra 852, citing Oxygenated Fuels Ass'n v. Davis, 331 F.3d 665, 667 (9th Cir. 2003).

The Commissioner's ruling was based in substantial part upon the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Briscoe v. LaHue, 460 U.S. 325; 103 S.Ct. 1108, 75 L.Ed.2d 96 (1983). App. 5 through App. 6. That case held that the common law witness privilege, in existence in 1871 at the time of enactment of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, applied to Civil Rights cases. Briscoe affirmed a ruling of the Seventh Circuit that witnesses were absolutely immune from damages in a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case. On the other hand, the Seventh Circuit did not extend its ruling in Briscoe to ADA claims. Steffes, supra.

The Court of Appeals has suggested that the common law witness immunity may not be so absolute in Washington as it may have been in the past. Wynn v. Earin, 131 Wn. App. 28, 125 P.3d 829, review granted, 158 Wn.2d 1001 (2006). App. 7. Although Wynn dealt with a distinguishable issue, involving pre-litigation statements rather than statements made at trial, the court in Wynn suggested that a second look at the immunity might be appropriate: "Absolute immunity is a 'blunt instrument' solely in defense of a compelling public interest." Wynn, supra, p. 40.

II. The common law witness immunity is personal to the witness and does not immunize the witness' employer.

The Court of Appeals' Commissioner found that Dahlquist didn't raise at the right time the issue of whether or not the absolute witness immunity principle would extend to an employer of the witness' in an ADA case. The Commissioner cited a case which suggested that the witness' immunity extends to the witness' employer or principal. Cloutier v. Epping, 714 F.2d 1184 (1st Cir. 1983). Under Washington law, this Court has held that the qualified immunity of an employee does not extend to the employer. Savage v. State, 127 Wn.2d 434, 899 P.2d 1270 (1995). In that case the court held that in Washington, if a parole officer was granted qualified personal immunity as a defense, that immunity would not establish a defense for the parole officer's principal or the employer, in that case, the State of Washington. Savage, supra 439.

The Commissioner found that the immunity of the Kent City witnesses extended to the employer of the witness based upon Cloutier. App. 8. The Cloutier case, published in the same year as the ruling in Briscoe, involved a dispute over the development of a mobile home park in New Hampshire. Cloutier was not an ADA case. Cloutier applied the ruling in Briscoe. The court in Cloutier applied the limitation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, which does not permit application of principles of respondeat superior to hold a governmental employer liable for the wrong-doing of a governmental employee. Monell v. Department of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611 (1978). In a Federal Civil Rights Act case, the employee's governmental employer must have created an official policy or practice which caused a violation of another person's federal civil rights in order to be held liable. Cloutier, supra at 1191.

Although there is no vicarious liability in federal civil rights actions, there can be vicarious liability in ADA claims. Duvall v. County of Kitsap, 260 F.3d 1124 (9th Cir. 2001). Because respondeat superior exists under the ADA, Savage, and not Cloutier and 42 U.S.C. § 1983, would apply. Petitioner has an attorney who will argue his case before this Honorable Court.

CONCLUSION

Dahlquist has claimed that law enforcement officers testified falsely against him in a federal disability lawsuit. He claims that this was retaliation against him for commencing the disability lawsuit. Those allegations pursuant to CR 12(b)(6) must be treated as true. The only reason given for dismissal of this suit lies with a decision that the absolute common law witness immunity prevents Dahlquist from continuing his lawsuit. But common law witness immunity may well be diminishing as a legal concept in Washington State. More importantly, Dahlquist claims that the overriding intent and breadth of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, a newer and broader statute than the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1871, does not confer immunity on law enforcement officers who testify falsely against him or the City which employed those officers. Further, regardless of whether the witness immunity or privilege, applies to the ADA, that immunity, which is personal to the witness, does not immunize the employer, the City of Kent. Dahlquist's claim is a retaliation claim and not the claim in his first lawsuit against the Kent City Jail for failure to accommodate his disabilities. It does not matter that he lost his underlying claim if there has been retaliation against him for pursuit of that claim. For the reasons stated above, it is urged that the decision of the Washington State Court of appeals be reversed and remanded to the Superior Court for resumption of the lawsuit.

No. 57879-1-I

COMMISSIONER'S RULING GRANTING MOTION ON THE MERITS TO AFFIRM

(Filed Jun. 5, 2007)

Daryl Dahlquist (Dahlquist) appeals from a trial court order dismissing his suit against the City of Kent, the mayor, and four individuals who were police or corrections officers. This Court set a motion on the merits to affirm pursuant to RAP 18.14. The motion is granted.

FACTS

In 1996, Dahlquist was cited for trespassing and sent to jail. The jail refused to provide Dahlquist with a sleep apnea device and he sued, alleging a violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). A jury determined that Dahlquist was not disabled and denied his claim. Dahlquist appealed and this Court affirmed.[1]

Dahlquist sued the City again based on testimony its employees gave in the first suit. According to Dahlquist, he was wearing a medical alert bracelet at the time of his arrest but the four officers named in the present suit gave testimony which suggested he was not. One officer also gave testimony that suggested Dahlquist made unsubstantiated allegations that someone was trying to harm him. Dahlquist contends that this testimony impugned his credibility and prejudiced him before the jury.[2]

In his complaint, Dahlquist alleged that the officers' testimony was false and made in retaliation for his ADA claim. He sued the officers, and also alleged that the mayor failed to investigate his complaint. The trial court granted the City's motion to dismiss under CR 12(b)(6). Dahlquist has appealed.

[1] Dahlquist v. Kent, cause number 51796-1-I, decided April 19, 2004.

[2] Dahlquist argued in his appeal that the trial court erred in admitting some of the testimony by the officers. In rejecting this argument, the Court of Appeals held that the issue was not preserved as to testimony given without objection, that there was not error as to other testimony, and that there was no prejudice.

CRITERIA FOR MOTION ON THE MERITS

RAP 18.14(e)(1) provides:

> A motion on the merits to affirm will be granted in whole or in part if the appeal or any part thereof is determined to be clearly without merit. In making these determinations, the . . . commissioner will consider all relevant factors including whether the issues on review, (a) are clearly controlled by settled law, (b) are factual and supported by the evidence, or (c) are matters of judicial discretion and the decision was clearly within the discretion of the trial court or administrative agency.

These criteria are applied in light of State v. Rolax.[3]

DECISION

The trial court should dismiss a claim under CR 12(b)(6) only if it appears that the plaintiff cannot prove any set of facts, consistent with the complaint, that would entitle the plaintiff to relief. Hoffer v. State of Washington, 110 Wn.2d 415, 420, 755 P.2d 781 (1988). In passing on a motion to dismiss, the plaintiff's allegations are presumed to be true and the court may consider hypothetical facts. Hoffer, 110 Wn.2d at 420. A dismissal under the rule is reviewed de novo. Hoffer, 110 Wn.2d at 420.

[3] 104 Wn.2d 129, 702 P.2d 1185 (1985).

The ADA prohibits retaliation for bringing an ADA claim. The relevant provision, 42 U.S.C. § 12203, provides:

> (a) Retaliation. No person shall discriminate against any individual because such individual has opposed any act or practice made unlawful by this Act or because such individual made a charge, testified, assisted, or participated in any manner in an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under this Act.

Dahlquist maintains that the testimony he contends was false was given in retaliation for his pursuit of an ADA claim. The City maintains that the testimony, even if it is false, which the City denies, is not actionable.

Words spoken in the course of judicial proceedings, if they are applicable and pertinent to the subject of the proceeding, are absolutely privileged and cannot be the basis for a suit. McClure v. Stretch, 20 Wn.2d 460, 465-67, 147 P.2d 935 (1944). "Perjury is, of course, a public offense and punishable in criminal proceedings, but from earliest times the giving of false testimony has not been treated as a wrong actionable in civil proceedings." W.G. Platts, Inc. v. Platts, 73 Wn.2d 434, 440, 438 P.2d 867 (1968). In general, witnesses are absolutely immune from suit based on their testimony. Bruce v. Byrne-Stevens & Assocs. Eng'rs, 113 Wn.2d 123, 125, 776 P.2d 666 (1989). A conspiracy to give false testimony is also not actionable. W.G. Platts, 73 Wn.2d at 440-41; House v. Belford, 956 F.2d 711, 720 (7th Cir. 1992). The defense of absolute privilege or immunity avoids all liability. McNeal v. Allen, 95 Wn.2d 265, 267, 621 P.2d 1285 (1980); Gold Seal Chinchillas, Inc. v. State, 69 Wn.2d 828, 830, 420 P.2d 698 (1966).

Dahlquist, however, maintains that the ADA preempts witness immunity.

> It is well established that the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution grants Congress the power "to preempt state and local laws." Oxygenated Fuels Ass'n v. Davis, 331 F.3d 665, 667 (9th Cir. 2003). "State law is pre-empted to the extent that it actually conflicts with federal law." Id. (quoting English v. Gen. Elec. Co., 496 U.S. 72, 78-79, 110 L. Ed. 2d 65, 110 S. Ct. 2270 (1990)). Thus, "where state law 'stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress,'" the federal interests must prevail. Id.

Pardi v. Kaiser Permanente Hosp., Inc., 389 F.3d 840, 851 (9th Cir. 2004) (holding that California state litigation privilege does not bar claims under the ADA).

The United States Supreme Court examined a similar contention in Briscoe v. LaHue, 460 U.S. 325, 345-46, 103 S. Ct. 1108, 75 L. Ed. 2d 96 (1983), and concluded that absolute testimonial immunity bars any claim for civil rights violations under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on an allegation of perjury. The Court presumed that the members of Congress were familiar with common law principles and intended them to apply, absent specific provisions to the contrary. Briscoe v. LaHue, 460 U.S. at 330. It characterized the common law's protection for witnesses as so well grounded in history and reason that it refused to believe that Congress would intend to impinge on it by anything other than specific language. Briscoe v. LaHue, 460 U.S. at 334. Where a common law principle is well established, " . . . the courts may take it as given that Congress has legislated with an expectation that the principle will apply except 'when a statutory purpose to the contrary is evident.'" Astoria Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Solimino, 501 U.S. 104, 108, 111 S. Ct. 2166, 115 L. Ed. 2d 96 (1991) (quoting Isbrandtsen Co. v. Johnson, 343 U.S. 779, 783, 96 L. Ed. 1294, 72 S. Ct. 1011 (1952)).

Dahlquist argues that Briscoe is not controlling. But he sets out no basis for treating the ADA differently. Contrary to Dahlquist's assertion in his reply brief, the ADA is not broader than 42 U.S.C. §1983. The civil rights statute imposes liability on "[e]very person" for "the deprivation of any rights . . . secured by the Constitution and laws". 42 U.S.C. § 1983 (underlining added). The purpose of the ADA is "to provide a clear and comprehensive national mandate for the elimination of discrimination against individuals with disabilities." 42 U.S.C. § 12101(b)(1). The ADA prohibits disability discrimination by a "public entity", 42 U.S.C. § 12132, and does not provide for individual liability. Walsh v. Nev. Dep't of Human Res., 471 F.3d 1033, 1037-38 (9th Cir. 2006). The remedies in the ADA are the same as the remedies set out in the Civil Rights Act of 1964. 42 U.S.C. §12188. A claim under the ADA is subject to the defense of qualified immunity. Bartell v. Lohiser, 215 F.3d 550, 557 (6th Cir. 2000). There is no evident purpose in any provision of the ADA to abrogate the well established common law principle of witness immunity. Although Dahlquist references the Code of Federal Regulations, he cites nothing that provides a basis for believing that the ADA abrogated the witness immunity privilege. Nor is there any authority holding that application of the privilege to the ADA stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress.

Wynn v. Earin, 131 Wn. App. 28, 125 P.3d 829, rev. gra., 158 Wn.2d 1001 (2006), is inapposite. In Wynn, the Court found in the Health Care Information Act specific provisions creating a cause of action for the unauthorized disclosure of health care information even in judicial proceedings. Wynn, 131 Wn. App. at 39. Dahlquist points to no comparable provisions in the ADA. Testimonial immunity therefore bars any claims against the individuals who testified and any derivative or conspiracy claims based on that testimony.

Dahlquist suggests that the dismissal was premature because he was not allowed discovery. But a dismissal under CR 12(b)(6) is appropriate only if there are no facts, hypothetical or otherwise, that would sustain the claims alleged. The claims Dahlquist asserted rest on the testimony given at trial. If the testimony is privileged, there are no facts that would sustain his claims and discovery is pointless and unnecessary.

Dahlquist argues in his reply brief that even if the officers have immunity, the City, as their employer, does not. Contentions raised for the first time in a reply brief need not be considered. Yakima County (West Valley) Fire Prot. Dist. v. Yakima, 122 Wn.2d 371, 397, 858 P.2d 245 (1993). Nevertheless, if the witnesses have immunity, there is no basis for liability against the City. Cloutier v. Epping, 714 F.2d 1184, 1191 (1st Cir. 1983). In his opening brief, Dahlquist does not address the dismissal of his claim against the mayor and it is accordingly not addressed in this ruling. In re F.D. Processing, Inc., 119 Wn.2d 452, 456, 832 P.2d 1303 (1992) (appellate court will generally not address unbriefed issues).

Kent has requested an award of fees on the ground that the appeal is frivolous.

> In determining whether an appeal is frivolous and was, therefore, brought for the purpose of delay, justifying the imposition of terms and compensatory damages, we are guided by the following considerations: (1) A civil appellant has a right to appeal under RAP 2.2; (2) all doubts as to whether the appeal is frivolous should be resolved in favor of the appellant; (3) the record should be considered as a whole; (4) an appeal that is affirmed simply because the arguments are rejected is not frivolous; (5) an appeal is > frivolous if there are no debatable issues upon which reasonable minds might differ, and it is so totally devoid of merit that there was no reasonable possibility of reversal.

Streater v. White, 26 Wn. App. 430, 434-35, 613 P.2d 187 (1980).

In light of Briscoe, which Dahlquist did not acknowledge in his opening brief, and the lack of any provision in the ADA even remotely suggesting that the ADA abrogates witness immunity, Dahlquist's appeal is very nearly frivolous. But his argument that federal law may preempt the privilege is not frivolous and there is no case dealing directly with application of the witness privilege to the ADA. Resolving all doubts in Dahlquist's favor, the appeal will not be characterized as frivolous. Kent's request for an award of attorney fees on appeal on the ground of frivolity is therefore denied.

Now, therefore, it is hereby ORDERED that the motion on the merits is granted and the decision of the trial court is affirmed.

DARYL LEROY DAHLQUIST, Appellant, v. CITY OF KENT; KENT CITY JAIL; KENT POLICE DEPARTMENT; BRUCE WHITE, Mayor of the City of Kent, in his official capacity; DARIN MAJACK, PAUL PETER, HARVEY WENDERSKI and DAN MICHAELS, in their official capacity, Respondents.	No. 57879-1-I ORDER DENYING MOTION TO MODIFY (Filed Aug. 17, 2007)

Appellant Daryl Dahlquist moves to modify the commissioner's June 5, 2007, ruling granting a motion on the merits and affirming the decision of the trial court. Respondent has filed a response to the motion to modify. We have considered the motion under RAP 17.7 and have determined that it should be denied.

Now, therefore, it is hereby

ORDERED that the motion to modify is denied.
